Supply of Bird Flight Diverters
Royal Society for Protection of Nature
Contact: 176953933

Date of Announcement: September 16, 2019
Last date of Submission of Bids: October 16, 2019

Background

Out of many threats faced by the wintering Black-necked Cranes in the country, the recent identified threat posed by human interference is the installation of overhead electric cable lines. The Black-necked Cranes are known to have poor vision and collision of the bird against these lines have been reported from the fields.

Therefore, to reduce this impact, we are planning to mark the overhead cable lines with flight diverters, which would deter the cranes from colliding with the lines.
